Third Term Talk.

Mr. Cleveland's declaration in favor of a sound and safe currency of a kind not specified, and his noble determina tion to continue to protect American institutions against the schemes of insidiousness in general, have been understood, in many quarters, as a bid for his nomination by somebody for a third term as President.

It is significant of the current estimate of Mr. Cleveland's disinterested patriotism that such should be the interpretation put upon his letter to the Chicago bankers.

We do not share the apprehensions here expressed by our esteemed contemporary, the Post-Express of Roches

The Republicans certainly will not nominate Mr. Cleveland. They have good men enough of their own, not one of whom is larger than the Republican party.

For the Populist nomination in 189 Mr. Cleveland might have some show as the promoter and supporter of the income tax. When Mr. Young saw the premier's yacht anchored in the harbor of Chefoo he went on board to pay his respects. The premier looked like a starving teggar. He wore the coarsest raiment. His beard and forehead had not been shaved, and his queue hung down from a clotted mass of hair. Lines of sorrow streaked his face, and his hands were grimy. The first man in the empire, noted for his carefulness in raiment and cleanliness of person, appeared as the meanest subject, that he might, by privation and penance, do reverence the creed of his ancestors. A few days later, when Mr. Young met Li at Tientsin, the beggar's mien had vanished, and he was again the wellappointed nobleman.

are tired; the politicians are tired; the members of the General Assembly are tired, of the Senatorial "deadlock." If the advice of the TRANSCRIPT had been followed weeks ago-to "elect a Senator"-this tired feeling would have vanished long since. It was wellmeant advice; it was sensible advice; it was the advice of the best people of the State irrespective of party; it was the advice of the loyal part of the Republican party in the State, to whom the majority of the members of the General Assembly owe their election, but the advice was not followed. Mr. Addicks' papers, and his supporters by their action said, like the sinner who enjoys the pleasures of sin for a season, "there is time enough yet." Mr. Massey's quartet with stony hearts turned away from the purest Republican gospel to flirt with Democratic legislation. They reversed the grand old Republican doctrine—majority rule -and said the minority, and the minority of the minority, shall henceforth rule in Delaware. They have made sick the heart of every true Republican. Men who have loyally struggled for the mastery for years in this State see nothing but hopeless division and they are sad. They have asked who are responsible for the present situation of affairs and the answer comes, George V. Massey and J. Edward Addicks. It is the firm conviction of the rank and file of the Republican party in this county that to Mr. Massey, primarily, and to Mr. Addicks, secondarily, is due the deadlock, the defeat of majority rule, and they are saying to their representatives, their loyal, manly Republican Representatives, "let it be nobody sooner than the men who would force themselves upon an unwilling party." And who shall say the people

THE TRANSCRIPT has urged the election of a Senator with a persistency unequalled by any other paper in the State. Though loyal to party organization, holding to the right of majority rule, and with the firm conviction that in ability, in statesmanship, in honesty of purpose and integrity of character Anthony Higg ns, the nominee of his party, has no superior within the State, we said to the members of the General Assembly "elect a Sena-tor"—elect an honorable man, a good Republican, if not your choice, the best you can under the circumstances. This advice was in harmony with the feelings of the loyal and majority-rule Republicans of the Legislature, excepting Mr. Wilson whose honesty no one doubts and who may have been wiser in his course than all the rest, though ve cannot say that yet, and they ma They offered the names of several gen tlemen, good Republicans and able to be laughed at by the friends of Mr. Addicks and to be accused of "playing smart" by the friends of Mr. Massey. What more could they do? For the honest effort they any sooner with such treachery to all have made to elect a Senator, for their party organization and the public good. loyalty to party organization and to caucus rule even when against them. for their labors as legislators often hindered and harrassed by factional opposition, they deserve the thanks of all true Republicans, and with the keenest regret and after consulting with many leading Republicans in this county, we are compelled to say to those Representatives, you can do worse than to adjourn without an election. Honorable defeat is better than dishonorable victory, and the people will be with you.

Mr. Passenger Agent, Mr. Auditor, the Frenchman, the en gineer, ye editor, all said, "I would surrender; my life is worth more than the filthy lucre." "Poor miserable men," exclaimed the aroused subject of Queen Victoria, "five to two and you would surrender your property and I will leave you-only Mr. Auditor, do you follow me soon." inquiry upon every Republican mind. "Why will not the General Assembly elect?" Because two selfish men stand in the way and either can prevent, as each has prevented, the election. Those men are George V. Massey and J. Edward Addicks, and apparently they each have no interest in the future of the Republican party-with them it is all self. This is the way it appears to the whole nation outside Delaware and in twelve months it will be as plainly seen by Delawareans. Mr Higgins, not only the logical candidate and the ablest man in the politics of Delaware to-day, but the party's candidate, has shown his true Republicanism by his attitude during the pas three months. His friends have offered other men as a compromise and now apparently they are forced to the alternative of voting for a disorganizer and a bolter or suffering the election to go by default. If they choose one of the bolters there is no certainty of an election, for Mr. Addicks expects to out-Massey Mr. Massey and Mr. Massey expects to out-Addicks Mr. Addicks There is little choice between the devil and the deep sea, and the only refuge is upon the grand old Republican rock of majority rule. The men who shall drag down the Republican party will not live long enough to repent it. Mr. Massey has directed his campaign secretly, but he has directed it, and Mr. Addicks has been openly in the ield but they have both mistaken the temper of the rank and file of the Republican party. They have thought that loyalty and love of party will bring the majority to them but the masses in New Castle county say "never" and it s time that notice is served on them and their selfish followers. The TRAN-SCRIPT speaks only for itself but had we a vote in the General Assembly no man who has assumed the attitude of Messis. Addicks and Massey should have

Because he, more than any other man, is responsible for the refusal of the Addicks men to caucus, whispering into their ears "Higgins, be careful or it is Higgins," as he whispered in the ears of the friends of Mr. Higgins, "Addicks, be careful or it is Addicks." As honorable gentlemen as can be found in this State bear testimony to this fact. Because in the presence of General James H. Wilson, and your rights. You are cowards Mr. Washington Hastings, Hugh C. His closest friends at that time to Mr. Massey and again urged him to be their candidate and he, like Peter. "thrice denied" the wish of his friends but no man who has ever known Mr. Massey would believe that he "began to curse and to swear" or even to be the least profane as the State Sentinel tries to intimate in its last issue, in order to find something good to say of Mr. Addicks.

> Six years ago when the writer had a vote for United States Senator his personal choice was George V. Massey, but Mr. Massey had no faith in the success of the Republican party in the '88 campaign and on two occasions during the canvass in riding from Wilmington to Dover on the Delaware Railroad, argued with the writer, then a candidate, that Republican effort could avail nothing in this State. Those talks are trifles of themselves, but they are an index to Mr. Massey's political course in this State for years. Again, Mr. Massey was at the Union League in Philadelphia when the news of Republican victory came on the night of that election, and he ridiculed the idea that it was true. As the attorney for the Pennsylvania railroad. along with Mr. Gray, who is retained it is said at $5,000 a year, Mr. Massey had more influence with Democratic Legislatures than any three Democrats in the State, and in 1889 Democrats stood ready to vote for him for Senator, and they are honorable men and as party men no one would have censured them. And further, in 1888 Mr. Massey made one speech in Middletown that in its praises of Mr. Cleveland de-

If he would not contest Mr. Gray's seat in 1894, he would not in 1900, and Mr. Massey's election would mean a vote presumably with the Republican Party in the Senate on National affairs, for corporations generally, and the party in the State and especially in New Castle county would go to is the conviction of the rank and file as well as the party leaders in this county. Will Mr. Massey and his friends wreck the party?

THERE is more that we would like o say as an earnest Republican ready to make any honorable sacrifice to snatch the Senatorship from the contest of two years hence which means factional fighting and utter defeat, but time and space forbid. We speak only for ourselves in these matters, but we believe we reflect the sentiment of the Republicans of this county, and with them we hope against hope for the election of one of the best of Republicans in the State who can unite the party. That man should be Mr. Higgins, but if that is impossible let it be some other tried and true Republican who seeks the welfare of the people, the success of his party, and not merely to gratify selfish ambition or sordid preferment.

prominence, so far as we can learn, that questions the validity of the Republican caucus held at Dover last Monday night at midnight. We are Monday night at midnight. We are informed by the Dover correspondents that Mr. Massey doubts the legality of the decision of that caucus. Mr. Massey is not accounted a great constitutional lawyer, nor does he make any such pretensions. His strength as a lawyer lies chiefly in his knowledge of the practice and customs of the courts, and therefore he is more noted as an attorney than as a counsellor at law. His opinion on practice is enas an attorney than as a counsellor at law. His opinion on practice is entitled to respect and consideration, but thus far, neither he nor anyone else has given a single precedent for his solitary opinion. On the contrary there is no end of precedents for the position that the action of the eleven men in caucus last Monday was entirely regular, customary, proper and valid, and that their action was absolutely conclusive in the matter. There lutely conclusive in the matter. There are nineteen Republicans in the General Assembly of whom ten constitue a majority. There were thirteen men in the caucus originally, and none men in the caucus originally, and none of them went out until after an hour of waiting for the six absentees, and then they went out only upon the request of Mr. Massey's friends and agents, and after they had volunteered the promise to return whenever the other members should come in. They felt, they said, that there ought to be sivteen men present since if to be sixteen men present, since it required sixteen votes to elect a ena-tor in joint session of the Legislature. This we believe embodies Mr. Massey's view. After the two men, Messrs. Flemming and Pierce, both ago. His closest friends at that time say that to all their appeals "he gave the same answer that he would not again be a candidate for that office."

Because those same friends of a life time now say that a year ago they went caucus would take a ballott at 12 calcular that the caucus would take a ballott at 12 calcular that the caucus would take a ballott at 12 calcular that the caucus would take a ballott at 12 calcular that the caucus would take a ballott at 12 calcular that the caucus was the calcular that the caucus would take a ballott at 12 calcular that the caucus was the calcular that o'clock that night. This was the second notice that had been given of the meeting. Every precaution was therefore taken to apprise each and every Republican member of wha was going to be done. True to their notice, at midnight the ballot was notice, at midnight the ballot was aken, and it resulted in a positive majority for Senator Higgins. To make assurance doubly sure a resolution was then adopted, making the majority unanimous. Thus far every step had been regular, customary, legal, fair and open. The most hypercritical could find no fault with that proceeding and we cannot find a Reproceeding, and we cannot find a Republican nor a Democrat, of any pro-minence who does not regard that proceeding as entirely regular and nding. "Mr. Massey stands alone. Neverheless his opinion here as always, de serves consideration. We cannot help however, to remind our readers that Mr. Massey's opinion would be of infinitely more weight if he were a infinitely more weight if he were a disinterested critic. Notwithstanding his repeated declarations to the contrary, Mr. Massey is a Senatorial aspirant. He was opposed to a caucus from the first. He and his friends tried to dissuade certain members of the General Assembly who are friendly to Senator Higgins, to remain out of the caucus. His argument was that he feared Mr. Addicks, and not Mr. Higgins would be the choice of the caucus. Such was his earnest advice up to last Wednesday. But Mr. Higgins' friends insisted that such an irregularity should never be tolerated to enter the regularly called caucus and abide by its decisions. It is unfortunate that the friends of Mr Addicks were not equally courageous and patriotic. How far Mr. Massey inlighted his Democratic auditors. It was these and similar facts that defeated Mr. Massey in 1889. And they should have defeated him. exact line with Mr. Massey's reiterated > his pledge of more than two years ago, namely to support and befriend Mr. Higgins in his laudible ambition for re-election. His advice was accept as sincere, but it was regarded as un-wise and as based upon an imperfect knowledge of the situation. But in the light of what has transpired this week—Mr. Massey's undoubted can-didacy and the persistence with which his three friends have been voting for him-it is reasonable to suspect that his advice was not wholly sincere and not disinterested. We regret that we are driven to this conclusion."

There is no advantage in setting fruit trees of any kind in the garden. All fertil ty and moisture in the garden is needed by the growing crops.

The fruit grower has no better friend, no more useful agent than the pollen-carrying honey seeking bee. The interests of the beekeeper lie in nearly

If long or course manure is plowed under, and followed by a dry season, the crop may be damaged; moreover, if the same manure has been spread or top after the crop has been planted making the farm, and never in all that crop would have been better and would have better withstood the drouth.

An Ohio farmer says that his 100 tands of bees pay him more than all the rest of his 60 acre farm, and do not require half so much labor. Wherever alfalfa is grown bees should follow; and even for the sake of bees it may pay to raise alfalfa, if it will grow in your latitude.

Lambs to grow rapidly, must be furnished with a good variety of food and kept constantly gaining. One reason for the English supremacy in mutton growing is that there the lambs and sheep are fed always upon the best the land affords, and are not confined to short pastures and stubble fields.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT. The farmer has some advantage he never counts in reckoning up his year's profits. His home to live in, the products of his garden, poultry yard and dairy which have been consumed in his own family. Until he lives in the city awhile he does not realize what these luxuries cost when every one must be paid for.

The New York market is consid ered the egg market of the United States. Eggs have commanded such high prices that they have been a luxury. But now the hens are on double turn and within the reach of nearly all housekeepers. In one day 2,854,-000 eggs were received in that city, making a week's receipts run to 11,599,200 eggs. This increase in receipts of the "hen fruit" knocks the bottom out of prices. Some dealers sell 17 fresh eggs for 20 cents against 40 cents per dozen a few weeks ago. California ships a great many eggs to our Eastern

Just now many people are looking about them to see if there is any possi ble way in which to increase their yearly income. In "hard times" people try to save in every way possible as well as earn more money. Both poultry and duck raising have been shown to be a simple and comparatively easy way of making money; but years. The pains were severe and often l siress methods should be adopted in every business or calling. Too often the question of raising chickens seems so insignificant a pursuit that right here is where failure comes, because of the lack of good business management. Start modestly, use comme sense, be observant, read about others experience, compare with your own; these points, with careful management, should bring success. A MORTGAGE LIFTER. President Allen at the butter-makers eeting said among other things: "You show me a community of farmers who are largely interested in the dairy industry and I will show you a community of prosperous and happy people, no mortgages on their farms, plenty of money, children properly educated and all enjoying the luxuries of life.
